

I listen to both satellite radio and local stations. I enjoy the ability to choose based on quality of service and perceived value. Satellite radio provides competition to previously available radio stations. Consumers should be able to choose whether to listen to satellite radio (and pay a fee) or listen to free radio and listen to ads. The government should not attempt to regulate this choice, but rather the free market should determine what will be successful.